The Email Engine

What the list is telling us, what's already working, and the rebuild that turns 1,500 founders into steady conversations with Jeff.

WHAT'S WORKING

The list is growing, and it's listening.

Founders are opening Jeff's emails at rates most lists never see, and almost nobody leaves.

1,545 2.4×
founders on the list today, up from 643 in January

748
new founders entered the welcome sequence since mid-August

~18,000
automated emails delivered by Jeff's sequences

54%
average open rate across the 10-email welcome sequence

65–79%
opens on event emails (Fatal Flaws, Burn Rate, workshop follow-ups) unsubscribe rate on every single email. The list wants more of Jeff.

≤1%

Top performers

| EMAIL | SENT | OPENED | CLICKED |
|---|---|---|---|
| Accelerator info packet (hand-raisers) | 26 | 96% | 58% |
| Burn Rate workshop follow-up | 118 | 78% | 28% |
| Fatal Flaws: "We start in one hour" | 89 | 65% | 22% |
| WhatsApp invite: GNC or Vitamin Shoppe | 1,248 | 57% | 4% |
| Welcome #1: "what you just signed up for" | 743 | 61% | 9% |

Open rates are inflated across the industry by Apple Mail's privacy feature, so we treat clicks and replies as the real signal. Even by that stricter measure, Jeff's warm audiences click 5 to 10 times more than a typical list.

WHAT WE LEARNED

The stories land. The ask comes too late.

I went through all 11 sequences, 59 automations and the last 30 broadcasts. Five things stood out.

1. Small, warm groups convert. Event registrants and hand-raisers click 17–58% of the time. The full list clicks 2–5%. That gap is the whole opportunity: the people leaning in should get a different email than everyone else.
2. Your stories are the engine. The end zone, the July 3rd call, Krystal's raise, Kilimanjaro and the honest ledger hold attention better than anything else in the sequence. They stay.
3. The welcome sequence never really asks. Over 31 days, the first link to work with you shows up on Day 25. By then a quarter of people have drifted. And the new $997 Strategy Session isn't mentioned at all.
4. Too many directions. Ten welcome emails point to nine different things: resources, LinkedIn, a poll, Babu, WhatsApp, the MBA, the book, and the application. Each is good. Together, people don't know what you want them to do.
5. After Day 31, founders go quiet. There's no weekly rhythm after the welcome, so a founder who finishes it only hears from you when there's a launch.

Housekeeping I'm cleaning up

- Paying clients and buyers still receive "apply to work with me" emails. Adding rules so customers stop getting pitched.
- Two welcome sequences are running the same copy. Merging them into one.
- Six older sequences (the DreamMakers accelerator, the February masterclass, the April re-engagement, finished Babu flows) are still switched on, some with dead links and retired offers. Turning them off.

Good news: the free-resource delivery is solid. Every kit form tags the founder, sends the kit, and starts the welcome sequence, and every download link works.

THE REBUILD

Three pieces, one job: more conversations.

Goal: 2 to 5 sales conversations a week from the list, without becoming the guy who emails too much.

Free resource

Kits, masterclass, WhatsApp

Already working. Delivers the kit and hands the founder to the welcome sequence.

Welcome v3

10 emails · 21 days

Your best stories, rebuilt around coach Taki Moore's five email types: Problem, Proof, Philosophy, Plan, Ask. Each ends with "we should talk." The Strategy Session shows up on Day 5 instead of never. Day 1 asks founders to reply with their stage, so we know who's who.

The Tuesday Letter

Weekly · everyone

One idea a week, pulled from your best LinkedIn post, plus a Founder Mailbag: a real question from a founder and your straight answer. Turns the great replies we're getting into content, and shows people you actually read them.

The Hot List

Every other week · engaged only

Anyone who clicks a "work with Jeff" link, replies, joins an event, or starts Babu gets tagged automatically for 30 days. They get one short, blunt email from you every two weeks that ends in a direct invitation to talk.

How much email is that?

About 4 a month for most founders. About 6 a month for the founders who are actively leaning in. Launches like Hot Seat stay as their own short pushes, 3 to 4 a year.

How we'll know it works

A weekly scoreboard: new subscribers, replies, Hot List size, Strategy Sessions sold, applications. Every offer link gets tracked so we can see which email sold.

WHAT EMAIL SELLS

One clear front door: the Strategy Session.

The new Work with Jeff page gives every email a simple, low-regret next step.

| OFFER | PRICE | ROLE IN EMAIL |
|---|---|---|
| Free resources + WhatsApp group | Free | Entry point and trust |
| Babu | 10-day trial, then from $39/mo | PS line |
| MBA for CPG | $997 | For founders who want to do it themselves |
| Strategy Session Main ask | $997 | 90 minutes 1:1 + the MBA for life. Credited toward advisory within 30 days. |
| Private Advisory | $1,997/mo, 3-month min. | By application |
| VIP Advisory | $4,997/mo, 3-month min. | By application |

Next 30 days

1. This week: clean-up in Kajabi (customers stop getting pitched, old sequences off, founders who finish the welcome move on to the weekly letter).
2. Week 2: Welcome v3 goes live after your review. New subscribers start on it; current ones finish the old version.
3. Week 2: first Tuesday Letter and first Hot List email (theme: gross margin).
4. Week 4: first scoreboard: which emails drove replies, Strategy Sessions and applications.

What I need from you: a read of the Welcome v3 emails (mostly your stories, tightened), and a few minutes a week to answer one founder question for the Mailbag.
